Eggs by Million Stored by U.S. In Cool Cavern

ATCHISON, KANSAS — If 6 than 600 million eggs that raisers wants are getting the best possible care in what is said to be the world's largest uniform temperature refrigerator, a limestone cavern at Whiskey Creek, two miles from here.

Reduced to powdered form, they constitute only a little over one-quarter of those bought by the government under its price support program for eggs, the cost of which is nearing the 100 million dollar mark.

The government is required to maintain the price of eggs at 90 per cent of parity which is the price deemed fair in relation to the cost of things the poultryman buys. The support price for eggs is 33 cents a dozen.

Recently the nation's hens have been producing about 5 per cent more eggs than the public has bought.

CCC Buys Surplus

The difference, after drying, is purchased by the commodity credit corporation to an accumulated total now of about 2.33 billion eggs, largely unsalable, either at home or abroad.

Meanwhile, the eggs must be stored, and a great quantity of them has come into the Atchison cave.

They come principally by rail from some 50 drying plants in Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Texas. Some of these plants were built after the price support plan went into effect.

At the drying plants the eggs are bought from poultrymen at 30c a dozen. They are then handed to a line of women, who break each individual egg into a cup and smell each one individually—one bad egg spoils a whole batch.

They are then sent by a conveyor to a heating chamber and sprayed from there into a drying chamber, after which they are put into barrels or, more rarely, cartons.

Case Makes 10 Pounds

A case of eggs, 30 dozen, makes 10 pounds of egg powder.

On a sample day, the storage cave here contains 694 freight car loads of egg powder. Since a car can carry an average of 136 barrels, the total in barrels—stacked three and four high, with wooden "pallets" between—comes to about 94,000.

This far from fills the 16½ acres of the cavern.

The rest, except for about an acre covered by limestone pillars, 178 of them, is given over to prunes, raisins and dried milk.

There are 21,677 tons of prunes—641 carloads—1,561 tons of raisins, 48 tons of milk and 9,741 tons of eggs.

The areas where the prunes and raisins are stored, in stacks reaching almost to the 12 foot ceiling, are filled with a pleasant odor. The eggs do not smell.

Neither does the cave, which is clean, dry and evenly cold.

CHICKEN-OF-TOMORROW CONTEST UNDERWAY

The second year of the second three-year "Chicken- of- Tomorrow" contest—a program to breed plump, hearty birds for better eating—is underway.

Harry L. Moore, head of the poultry department at V. P. I., and chairman of the state contest committee, gives these rules for Virginia poultrymen who want to compete:

The contest rearing period will be 12 weeks. The chicks are to be hatched the week of February 26, and the contest closes the week of May 21.

Fifteen live, wing-banded cockerels will be delivered to a dressing plant, and judging will be on the basis of the 15-bird sample.

The winning entry in the State contest may be sent to the southeastern regional contest the week of June 4.

Entry blanks and further information are available from Moore at V. P. I., Blacksburg.

MISS WALLACE NAMED ON COMMITTEE

Miss Maude E. Wallace, assistant director of the Extension Service at V. P. I., has been selected to serve on the newly formed public relations sub-committee of the Federal Extension Organization and Policy Committee.

The sub-committee will meet in Washington on January 10.

Miss Wallace also is a member of the executive committee, home economics division, National Land Grant College Association, which will meet in Chicago, Ill., February 27 and 28.

FRESHLY SEPARATED CREAM ADDED TO ALREADY CHILLED CREAM MEANS LOSS

You pour dollars away when you add freshly separated cream to cream that already has been chilled, says W. F. Asbill, Jr., associate Extension dairy husbandman at V. P. I.

Adding warm, fresh cream to cold always will lower quality as the temperature of the cold cream is raised. This promotes the growth of bacteria that produces off-flavors.

Asbill suggests that the freshly separated cream be cooled to at least 60 degrees F. before adding it to the chilled cream.

He reminds cream producers to keep their equipment clean, and to deliver cream as often as possible.

FLUORESCENT- LIGHTS UP TOBACCO INCOME

Proper use of fluorescent lights on dark - fired tobacco farms in Virginia could add from five to ten per cent to the net income from the crop, says Dr. J. L. Mason, Extension marketing specialist.

The increase would mean from $150,000 to $300,000 at present prices for Virginia growers.

Maxton lists labor saved, better prices from earlier sale of tobacco, more uniform sorting, and doing away with the uncertainties of natural lighting, as the advantages of using fluorescent lights at stripping and sorting time.

Maxton reports that 11 meetings were held in 10 fire-cured tobacco counties to demonstrate the use of fluorescent lights. More than 300 farmers and professional workers attended the meetings.
